WHODUNIT?

This item should perhaps have gone under the lost and found column.

LOST—one young encyclopedia salesman who inadvertently drove up to the door of the domicile of your humble scribe when it was besieged by 21 Irma ladies in various hobo disguises. These pro tem hoboes were bent on showing our English cousin just what a real Hobo tea could be when it really tried and their combined efforts were too much for the hapless book agent. He departed in a cloud of dust and is probably at Palm Beach or some other southern point by now. He was headed that way. And what have we found? One patched denim jacket, brown, left behind by one of the errand hoboes. Owner may have same after we've worn it to a Hobo Tea ourselves.

Card of Thanks

We'd like to take this opportunity to thank everyone who helped in anyway to make our silver anniversary such a happy occasion.—Jim and Mary.

Dutch farmers plan to turn B.C. marsh into productive farms

A group of enterprising Dutch immigrant-farmers are struggling against time in British Columbia's lush Fraser Valley to turn a tract of wild marsh land into a productive model farm community. In the Pitt Meadows, a large swamp area surrounded by decrepit dikes about 30 miles east of here, the farmers are using time-honored Dutch methods to supply dairy and farm produce to Vancouver, Canada's third largest city.

Spearheaded by J. Bloom, financier and lawyer from Wassenaar near the Hague, the group is reclaiming 7,000 acres of swamp-land, the large tract of open farm land in British Columbia's teeming lower mainland.

The area had been diked and farmed by pioneers after World War I but the flood waters of the wild Lillooet river had beaten them. One man who fought the waters for 21 years put it this way:

"We took one crop out of three. The river took the other two."

With the settlers gone the area became a paradise for hunters.

Bloom came to Canada with his family in 1948 and set up a company to dike and reclaim the area and build homes for future settlers. He admitted it might appear "fantastic" to land-starved Dutch farmers, who measure their property in yards, that Canada with her 3,600,000 square miles—280 times the size of the Netherlands, has little arable land not already occupied.

However, the vast grain belt of the Canadian prairies has been pushed as far north as possible and coastal farms are fast becoming inadequate to meet the needs of Canada's rapid urban growth.

First came the experts from the Netherlands, including Dr. Nicholas Biesveld, famed engineer and dike expert of Haarlem; J. Van Der Vegte, a Dutch farming expert; P. Van Der Graaf, of the technical school, Dordrecht, who was to supervise building, and others. The most urgent problem is rebuilding of the dikes. What the earlier settlers had failed to accomplish, the Dutch, with their centuries-old knowledge are taking in their stride. The job, including the repair of a 300-foot gap was completed in a year, using local labor.

At the same time a pump-house was built on 62 piles. The pump cellar and floodboxes are constructed of concrete and the super structure of Roman brick. The pumping capacity is 80,000 gallons a minute.

Within a year the land was dry and drainage ditches were cut. Soil analysis was made and the climate studied. In this valley area the average frost-free period is 132 days (May 20 to Sept. 28)—and for six months of the year there is a heavy wet snowfall which blankets the ground to a depth of six feet.

Van Der Vegte, working with experts of the University of British Columbia, lost no time in seedling with oats, grass and clover. Experimental plots were planted with wheat, barley, potatoes and vegetables.

The project was carefully planned. Nothing was left to chance. This care paid dividends and the vision of Bloom, who lives on the site with his family in a specially imported Dutch prefabricated house watched the jig saw slowly fit together a Dutch community.

Bloom is determined that nothing shall wreck his venture and the temptation to bring in farmers at this stage has been firmly resisted. Bloom's intention is to split the area up into 100 farms varying from 40 to 100 acres. These will be rented with an option to purchase should the company liquidate. But first, homes will be built and the farms drained and seeded. This preparatory work is still going on.

Bloom envisions his Pitt polder as a self-supporting unit living in close harmony with its surrounding communities. He says Dutch vision planned the polder and Dutch skill made it possible, but it not going to become a Dutch colony.

"When the time comes to pick the tenants neither race, creed or politics will be considered," he said. "All will be welcome if they make the grade. If any preference is shown it will be toward Dutch farmers who have been in Canada at least two years."

Woman dusts crops from plane

CALGARY.—Crop dusting by airplane is not a common Canadian occupation—especially for a woman.

At the controls of a Tiger Moth as it swept close over the 3,500-acre wheat fields of Walter Reich near Lethbridge recently was Mary Wilcox, 27, a partner in the firm Skyspray of Canada, Ltd., of Calgary.

In the last three years, Miss Wilcox has flown over 25,000 acres of grain in Alberta, dusting the crops with insecticide. It doesn't seem an unusual occupation to a woman who started flying at 16 in 1943, and who has given flying instructions to students at Philadelphia, on the west coast, and in Hawaii.

While working as a ferry pilot out of her home state of Pennsylvania a few years ago Miss Wilcox was forced down in the mountains of Guatemala, and spent several days under arrest as a suspected spy. Shortly after her release, she quit her job and took up skiing. That brought her to Banff and Calgary, where she became an instructor for Chinook Flying club.

A chance acquaintance with Frank Young, an Airline, Alta, garage owner, led to formation of the crop spraying company, and Miss Wilcox present job.

$30,000,000 pulp mill for Alberta

EDMONTON.—The Alberta government recently received assurance of the construction of a $30,000,000 pulp mill in the Edmonton area, about 130 miles west of here, Premier Manning has announced.

Preliminary construction plans call for an initial unit with a daily capacity of 300 tons of bleached sulphate, he said. At completion, about 1,400 persons would be employed.

The plant will be built by North-West Pulp and Paper Co., a subsidiary of North Canadian Oil Ltd., of Calgary. North Canadian Oil and St. Regis Paper Co. of New York would each contribute $5,000,000 and the other $20,000,000 would be raised from other sources.

Effective immediately, St. Regis will assume active management of Northwest and will start necessary action to implement plans for construction of the pulp mill. All the basic manufacturing materials for the mill will be acquired within a radius of 300 miles of the plant site, said company officials. The power plant will be fuelled by coal from the Bryn Mawr Mountain Coal Co., mine at Robb. A wholly-owned subsidiary of North Canadian Oil.

Northwest holds an agreement with the Alberta government for long-term timber cutting rights on an area of more than 4,000 square miles.

Appearance of "white" bear has residents in tizzy

BEAVERSON, Alta.—A bear, variously described as "all white," "yellowish white with dark markings" and "cinnamon colored," has been sighted by at least five district residents, touching off a wave of speculation on the mysterious addition to the district's bear population.

Speculation runs the gamut from "albinism" to "visitor from northern climes."

First sighted two weeks ago, the bear has been spotted at least four times since then in the general vicinity of the Smoky River, four miles south and east of here.

Fred Dewhurst says a "cinnamon bear" lumbered off in front of his car a few days ago. He is positive it's the same bear others have seen at a distance as "white."

Others are not so sure. Gordon Hestler, who farms about five miles from Beaverson, was the first to report the "mystery bruin." He spotted him as he was writing on the banks of the Smoky River about half a mile east of the John Stark home.

District residents say that the next morning to spot the bear was Lawrence Parrish who reportedly caught a glimpse of him in a hollow, a half mile north of the Stark home.

Jack Haworth, who farms a mile south of the Stark's happened to glance out the window of his home a few days later, and saw what he thought was a small white calf on the fringe of a bush, about two hundred yards away.

Going outside, he crept up on the animal and recognized it as a bear before it lumbered off into the trees.

Mel Newman, working in a field, was reported to have also seen the bear.

Since reports of the bear began to circulate in the district, residents have been speculating on the bear's origin. Some believe it is an "albino."

At least one resident, who has lived in the north many years, is said to be convinced the bear is a Kodiak. His theory is the late spring thaw in the mountains is, in some manner, connected with the bear's appearance this far south.

OUR COMPLETE SHORT STORY

Something to remember

By JOHN F. WATT

I MET her in the canteen at Thetford, '41, that was. When I was wearing the newness off my two stripes. Monica Philip just seemed to become one of the crowd . . . and I wrangled things as I paired off with her.

Seemed to me it just had to be that way. There was a clasp in our lot who read poetry . . . queer cove . . . and he once spouted stuff about "twin souls". Now I knew what he meant—twin souls, that was Monica and me.

"Some day . . . I told her. "This war'll be over—when I've slogged all the way to Berlin! Then I'll come back . . . and you'll be waiting for me, see? That's how I'll be."

She smiled, and laid her head on my shoulder.

"Sure . . . that's how it will be," she said, dreamy like, "We'll let the rest of the world slip by, the two of us . . ."

I think it was just the day afterwards that our lot got marching orders—just overseas. Seemed they needed us to get some corner general out of a jam. For once, I saw the Army move alick . . . too alick for me!

For I hadn't time to meet Monica. And, worst of all, I hadn't her address; all I knew was where we were. Land Army uniforms, and came into Thetford Thursdays Saturdays and Sundays . . . what a prize as I'd been, neglecting to find out where she lived, her home address . . .

Of course, I never thought we'd get on the move so quickly—but there it was, us pulling out . . . and Monica left behind!

I wrote a note to her, addressing it care of the canteen . . . but hadn't much hopes of her ever getting it.

Guess she didn't receive it, either. For I never heard from her. I'd enclosed my home address, so she could write and the old lady would forward it, when she got my overseas mailing address.

But no letter from Monica came. Me, I went around like a lost soul. I knew I loved her—there couldn't be anybody else for me!

The war dragged on. Plenty scrapping—never enough to make me forget Monica's dark hair and blue eyes.

We reached Berlin, finally. The war was over.

Soon I'd be going back—only Monica wouldn't be waiting for me.

Four kids—I often wondered how she took it, me going off without even a good-bye . . . a one-girl man, you'd call me—and the one girl was definitely Monica!

Back to Civvy Street. The same old grind. I began to realize the years were slipping past . . . and still I was on a hopeless quest, searching—searching for the girl I'd lost . . .

Then one day it happened. A slim figure in a tailored suit stanced at a bus stop. Something familiar about her—but I'd been mistaken so often. Only this time—yes, it was Monica! Took my breath away.

A chance in a million . . . but it had come off! Our paths had crossed, by something like a miracle.

There was the girl I loved, standing on a corner, waiting for a bus to come along! Only I told myself that she was waiting for me . . . yes, had been all those years, just like she'd said she would . . .

Me, I got to that corner like stunned lightning. I gripped her arm . . . saw her give a mighty start.

"Monica! Monica Philip . . . I said all the joy in the world made my voice tremble just a bit. 'It is you—must be!'"

"Don't you remember?" I broke in, eagerly, "Thetford . . . you were in the Land Army . . . The old lady had such a long time when we met—those walks down by the river . . . remember?"

"The doubts vanished from her blue eyes."

"Bill! It is you—Bill!" she cried, and I saw her eyes glitter, like there were tears in them. "Oh, Bill! I've been such a long time . . . so much has happened! I never dreamed we'd ever see each other again . . ."

"I wish now," I wanted to kiss her, but there were other people waiting on the bus, too.

I wish now . . . I'd kissed her. I'd would have seen, well, something to remember . . .

But I never thought. The car drew in at the bus stop. The driver was big and burly . . . nasty type, I reckoned. He leaned over, opening the door. I saw him look at me, scowling.

Monica saw the car, too. She drew away the arm I was still gripping.

"She gave me a last smile, that had a world of sadness about it . . . then walked to the car, plipping in beside the driver—her husband!"

That nasty type . . . Monica's husband . . . He barked something at her—I noticed she flinched, going all pale . . .

The car drew away, passed me. And I knew, somehow, that part of my heart had gone with it . . .

—I'll have to go. My-my husband . . . he doesn't like to be kept waiting . . .

And there were all kinds of fish stories buzzing about during the festival. These included the perennial one that an American landed a 42-pound trout and refused to register it in the competition.

"I've already got a car," he's supposed to have said. "I want to get this mounted and take it home."

Thousands flocked to the festival—with events held in town and at several of the huge surrounding lakes—to watch the north put on its traditional show, the canoe derby—which runs over tough water with many hazardous portages—was won for the third time by Roy Jackson and Paul Hanger.

Their time: 22 hours, 42 minutes, 47 seconds.

Also featured were old-time jigging competitions and everything else that's part of the colorful north.

An unusual investiture Dropped in bed with pillows, two Indian boys, Sinclair Weapicappe and Louis Whitechewan, who have been patients at Essex County Sanatorium, Windsor, Ontario, for the past five years, were recently invested as Boy Scouts.

Through the windows of their hospital room they could see a special guard of honor of 122 members of the 43rd Windsor Scout Troop into which they were being inducted.

There were 72 Wolf Cubs, 38 Scouts and 15 Rover of the 43rd (Prince Road Community Centre) Group on hand to welcome the new Scouts into the World Brotherhood.

The Calgary yards, next in size to those in Toronto and Winnipeg, are owned by Alberta Stockyards Co., a subsidiary of the C.P.R. The company was formed in 1905 by ranchers and bought by the railway in 1911.

A special feature of the Calgary yards is that cattle are sold by auction.

The Groat bridge spanning the North Saskatchewan river at West Edmonton is shown above. The bridge, named after the late Malcolm Groat, Edmonton planner who farmed in what is now West Edmonton, is being built by the City of Edmonton in co-operation with the Government of Alberta. Designed by the Bridge Branch of the Department of Highways who also is providing an engineer to supervise construction, the bridge is to be completed by December of this year at a cost of $1,004,109, half of which will be paid by the Alberta Government. Overall cost of the project is $2,150,000, including clover-leaf traffic approaches, street lighting, changes in the Municipal Golf Course, and another bridge over Stony Plain Road. Six piers of the bridge are in the river and one on land. The total length is 900 feet, with five 146-foot spans and two 110-foot spans. Bridge width between curbs will be 48 feet, providing for four lanes of traffic.

Thousands attend annual trout festival

FLIN FLON, Man.—Anyone who scrys Northerners aren't a kerdly race would have to get their words at the fourth annual Flin Flon Trout Festival, which has just wound up here.

For instance, take Stan Cook and David Brightnose. The two trail-looking Indians paddled their canoe over an arduous 138-mile, four-day course in the Gold Rush Canoe Derby, a festival feature.

They finished second. About an hour later, when anyone else would have still been panting, they presented themselves to take part in another gruelling festival item—the packing competition. This involved seeing who could carry the most 100-pound sacks of flour on his back and neck over a 40-yard stretch of ground.

The fish derby and a 1954 automobile were won by a 32½ pound lake trout and the 38-year-old hard rock miner who caught it, Norman Bryon got the big one while trolling with a No. 8 Gibbs Stearns spoon on a steel wire line.

The bait took about 15 minutes. But Bryon was really a little disappointed. His fish was smaller than one he caught during last year's festival—a 35-pounder. The contest winner weighed 38 pounds.

In fact, Bryon's catch was the smallest festival winner to date. But that doesn't mean the big ones are disappearing. Two or three weeks ago a 16-year-old boy reeled in a 40-pounder on a 15-pound test line, using a dime store rod and reel.

And there were all kinds of fish stories buzzing about during the festival. These included the perennial one that an American landed a 42-pound trout and refused to register it in the competition.

"I've already got a car," he's supposed to have said. "I want to get this mounted and take it home."

DUCK-BANDERS START PROJECT

Four duck banding crews, comprising about 20 wildlife officers from the United States and Canada, set out from Regina recently on the biggest banding operation in the province.

They hope to band 2,000 birds or more in the next five weeks, including at least 1,000 young ducks.

Purpose of the operation is to trace flyways followed by migrating birds from various sections of Saskatchewan. There are four main north-south flyways in North America and ducks hatched in Saskatchewan may use any or all of them.

The banding crews are mainly from the United States fish and wildlife service but representatives from some states, such as Louisiana and Minnesota are also included. There are two Saskatchewan Conservation officers and two men from the Canadian wildlife service on the operation.

Saskatchewan has been chosen for a major banding operation because it has the biggest duck output of any state or province on the continent.

May have found nesting place of whooping crane

The whooping crane's greatest secret—its nesting place—may soon be out.

The resources department announced six of these almost extinct birds, including young, were sighted on a helicopter in Wood Buffalo national park, astride the boundary of northern Alberta and the Northwest Territories.

World population of the whooping crane is only 24, and though wildlife experts have been trying for years to find their nesting grounds, the birds have always given them the slip.

Wildlife observers knew they wintered in Texas and journeyed to the Canadian north for summer nesting, but even when they were followed by planes, the cranes got away when reaching the north.

But as the wildlife experts were surveying the Buffalo population in Wood Buffalo park, the cranes were sighted.

Biologists are hopeful the nesting secret will be out when a more detailed report is received from the park, the department said.

Nocturnal creatures such as owls and tarsiers have abnormally large eyes, the larger to catch the night's faint light.

Alberta girl demonstrates how teaching can overcome infirmities

EDMONTON.—A demonstration of how successful teaching of the deaf and blind can be was given recently by a bright 10-year-old girl who had been blind and deaf since birth.

Marjorie Golinsky, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Albert Golinsky of Glenview, gave a natural and spontaneous exhibition of what she had learned during two years at the School for the Deaf at Halifax, Nova Scotia.

Under the guidance of Miss Margaret Fearon, whom the child calls "Miss M", the girl counted, donated and took off her sweater, found her mother and father amidst the group watching the private demonstration, sorted out a knife from an assortment of eating utensils and spoke the simple sentence, "I gave you a knife," found a stocking for her doll and put it on, and selected consecutive letters of the alphabet by the braille system, which she is just starting to learn.

The girl, who communicates with other people and objects mainly by a sense of touch, has been the pupil of Miss Louise Fearon, Miss M's sister, and has been able to attend the Halifax School for the Deaf through assistance provided by the Alberta Department of Education. She travelled to Edmonton by train with Miss Margaret Fearon as her companion. Although no school for the deaf exists in Alberta, the Department of Education is establishing one, to be located at some central point in the province.

Miss Fearon explained that teaching a child who is both deaf and blind is extremely difficult but she and her sister had taught several. Marjorie is the only western girl attending the school, the remainder coming from the Maritime provinces.

As an example of Marjorie's intelligence and ability to learn, she told how the girl had made a plasticine replica of the head of a doll which her mother had sent her for Christmas. So exact was the replica that a bandanna from the doll fitted the plasticine model perfectly.

Moisture Conditions In The Western Provinces

There was a slight decrease in the over-all moisture condition of the prairie during this past week, this figure now stands at 107 percent of normal, compared with 106 percent last week and 113 percent at this time a year ago.

The over-all condition for Alberta is now 92 percent of normal; Saskatchewan 111 percent and Manitoba 121 percent.

The rains which have fallen during the present growing season from April 1 to July 28 in Alberta have been 89 percent of normal; in Saskatchewan 123 percent of normal and in Manitoba 146 percent.

In both Saskatchewan and Manitoba all Crop Districts, without exception, have had better than average seasonal rain.

Generally favorable growing conditions have existed during the past week and crops have made good headway. Although most districts report sufficient moisture to take care of immediate needs, in some areas of both Sask. and Alberta, where the rainfall this year has been only normal or less than normal, or where stands of grain are particularly heavy, there will be need for further rainfall soon if present prospects are to be maintained.

Style note: There are more wearers of tartan in B.C. than in any other province, in fact more than in Scotland.

Immigrants entering Canada in 1953 totalled 169,000.

A Few Highway Laws All Should Know

The province-wide Courtesy Campaign sponsored by the Alberta Safety Council has scored fresh successes since it opened June 30 for a month's duration, according to early reports.

Local safety councils, municipal authorities and others are giving their full co-operation. In more than 50 Alberta cities, towns, villages and municipal districts, the campaign is being waged with new vigor.

Thousands of bumper stickers, posters and wallet cards have been distributed to campaign centres in the province. The bumper sticker in black and white coloring not only identifies a supporter of the program, but reminds other drivers that "Courtesy is My Code of the Road."

The wallet card setting forth the seven -point courtesy code can be kept handy in wallet or license case.

"The person who drives by the golden rule will never have a serious accident," says H. B. Macdonald, M.L.A., of Calgary, president of the Alberta Safety Council. "Safe driving is a moral responsibility and a daily demonstration of decent and moral conduct."

The concept of moral responsibility is embodied in the Code of the Road, which asks every motorist to:

1. Share the road by driving in the proper lane.
2. Allow ample clearance when passing.
3. Yield the right of way to other drivers and pedestrians.
4. Give proper signals for turns and stops.
5. Dim headlights when meeting or overtaking vehicles.
6. Respect traffic laws, signs, signals and road markings.
7. Adjust driving to road, traffic and weather conditions.

WILL THEY PROFIT?

(Calgary Albertan)

Alberta hasn't its T.V. yet but it is in a fine position to benefit from the mistakes of those who have this medium at their disposal. Like radio and other media before that, the tendency is to rush into it without knowledge of the possibilities of error.

Too much crime, too much concentration on the miseries of life, too great an emphasis on disasters; anything that is morbid and discouraging has often been in the past the chief resort of the public broadcaster. From radio stations, in fact, one can hear news of a fatal motor accident in the streets of Miami, Florida, or Timbuctoo, Africa, given precedence over matters of local interest which are not accompanied by blood and thunder, but are of far more importance to the listener's interests.

In the United States the chief protest against television is largely confined to the crime series. The National Association formed to endeavor to better the class of program rightly, it would seem, protests against the frequency of "murder, torture, sadism, morbid suspense and other fear and tension-inducing elements" of the television screen, particularly in those displays intended largely for children.

Are we to go through all this in Canada, with the probability of a need for Government censorship? It is up to the prospective TV owners here to decide whether to profit from what is obviously wrong or to give us exhibits not likely to be productive of complaints. They have all the opportunities to learn what is right before they start.

Canada's Latest Landmark

The Empire Stadium, built in Vancouver for the British Empire and Commonwealth Games, will seat 35,000 persons; this stadium is one of the largest in Canada, and certainly the most modern. From here and from other Games sites in Vancouver will come the first CBC television program to be seen simultaneously in Eastern and Western Canada, by means of co-axial and micro-wave facilities through the United States linking CBUT, Vancouver, with the CBC-TV network in Eastern Canada. Some 26 countries are participating in the Games, which will also be fully covered by CBC radio for audiences at home and abroad.

TRACTOR SAFETY

Loss of life in farm work most often results from mishandling of tractors. Overturning is the chief hazard of tractor operation. To avoid . . . spread wheels as far apart as practical for the job at hand; put liquid in tires according to manufacturers' instructions to reduce bouncing; stay off soft road shoulders and edges of cut-banks; avoid side hills where the slope could cause tipping if the low wheel drops into a depression, or the high wheel runs over a hump; hitch all drawn loads to the drawbar; make safe speeds a habit; stop by closing the throttle before using brakes.

EDMONTON REPORT

By Donald F. Smith

EDMONTON—Alberta's safety campaign, started at the first of the month, is drawing to a close and residents have good reason to hope that unofficially it continues for recent bureau of statistics figures show that Alberta's 1953 traffic deaths represented the greatest proportionate increase of any province.

It may be due to an inclination to drive faster as more and more roads are paved; the increasing number of vehicles in the province; or a combination of many factors.

Accident totals for the first six months of this year show some decrease from those of the corresponding period last year—there still were 75 deaths, compared with 82 in the first six months of 1953. In the first three weeks of July, police records carried the names of 12 persons killed on the province's streets and highways.

The safety campaign was only three days old when the summer's worst accident took the lives of five persons—including a mother and two of her children—when two cars collided head-on just south of Edmonton. This accident and one earlier this year near Calgary when five were killed were the two worst highway accidents in the province's history.

July 12 a 20-month-old child was killed when it walked out in front of a parked car. The driver, who had been in the car talking with a friend, did not see the child who still was there when he started to drive away. Another man died July 19 in a two-car collision on the Banff highway and a trucker was killed when his pipe-laden vehicle struck a road grader.

A 14-year-old girl lost her life under the wheels of a truck on a city street and a man was killed when he collided with a truck at a highway intersection.

These and the many accidents in which no one was killed but persons were severely injured took place despite the province's biggest safety drive, which began several weeks ago with Premier Manning's safety conference.

It is not a criticism of safety conference and campaign that is an indication that such work is not enough to save lives. That is why more and more efforts are being made to "engineer safety" into the province's roads and to seek more control over the persons who are allowed to handle the wheel of a motor vehicle. The mounting toll of life and limb resulted in higher penalties for traffic infractions this year.

It still isn't enough and safety officials emphasize that the main factor in cutting accident totals is the driver himself.

Speaking mainly about accidents on the highways, Paul Lawrence, safety director of the Alberta Safety Council, remarked a few months back: "The terrible severity of rural highway accidents is due almost entirely to speed. . . . Speed causes ordinary incidents to become emergencies."

He added that by driving according to his own capabilities and the road, weather and traffic conditions, the driver would be able to handle real emergencies like incidents.

The federal bureau of statistics says Alberta's 16,964 accidents, in addition to costing lives and injuries, resulted in property damage of $6,519,509. There are further costs that can be added to that. The latest edition of "Accident Facts," an annual publication of the U.S. Safety Council, estimates property damage at little more than one-third the actual cost of motor accidents. The remainder is composed of medical and hospital costs, insurance and wages lost through death or injury.

All in all, whether you are interested in your life or money more, it pays to conduct your own safety campaign 12 months of the year.

From the success of this month's campaign (more than 50 communities, their boards of trade, newspapers and radio stations, councils and garage participated) it appears the question of safety is up to the individual.

An Opportunity For Rural Albertans

Many young Albertans are undecided on their plans for the future. For those who plan to make farming their career, the Schools of Agriculture and Home Economics, operated by the Alberta Department of Agriculture, can give a very valuable background of training.

Emphasizing the practical approach to farming and homemaking, the courses offered at these schools will assist the future farmers and homemakers to make the most of their farm business. The term at the school is designed to permit students to remain on the farm until the fall work is finished and releases them in good time for the rush of spring work. This year the schools open on October 19 and close April 6, 1955.

The minimum age limit is 16 years, but older students receive first preference. There is no minimum standard of education, although prospective students should have at least grade eight standing.

Costs for a term are very reasonable. There is no tuition for residents of Alberta and the total estimated cost for one term is about $275.00. A certain amount of money must be added to this for laundry and incidental expenses.

Two types of courses are offered: the regular two-year course in both Agriculture and Home Economics, and the Two-Year One course designed for those students who have 70 or more High School credits. A popular new course was added to the Home Economics section last year. This was Typing and Business Training; a course designed to assist graduating girls to obtain satisfactory employment during the few years before they become homemakers. No other changes are planned for this year.

Any young person wishing to obtain more information or application forms may write to the Principal, School of Agriculture, Olds, Vermilion or Fairview.

We note that a Los Angeles brain surgeon has urged seat belts as compulsory equipment on passenger cars for use of the person occupying the seat next to the driver. Yorkton citizens proud of youthful golfing brothers

The Homeniuk family of Yorkton is quickly getting a sport reputation that rivals that of other great Saskatchewan families—like the Bentleys of Delisle, the Warwicks of Regina, the Abels of Melville. The Homeniuks are getting their reputation from golf and Yorkton's citizens are justly proud of them.

There are four young brothers who are more proficient at golf than the others of a large family of 10.

Wilfred at 16, is the present Saskatchewan amateur champion, last year's leader of the Saskatchewan Willington Cup team, and this year he has already won the Dauphin Open championship, the Hudson Bay tournament in Yorkton, and twice has led his city team in the recent Saskatchewan city's golf matches.

Ted at 17, is the Saskatchewan junior champion and last year was runner-up to the Canadian junior champ at Montreal.

Rudy at 20, is the Carleton Place champion, and last year when he won the trophy for the third straight time, Premier T. C. Douglas in presentation said, "you might as well keep it permanently." This year at the Dauphin tournament, Rudy scored a hole in one, the third of his career.

Gestapo at 12, is the boys' champion at Yorkton, even though Bill Kerr made him spot every other boy in the tournament 15 strokes!

Right now two other boys, Merv and Emil of the Homeniuk family, also golf, and eight-year-old Emil almost disgraced the family recently by shooting a 104.

The Homeniuk golf story is one that delights the heart of anyone who loves the game.

Home Workshop

The attractive well-built fence is growing in popularity as a feature of the modern home. Just as we all want our homes to differ from the others in the neighborhood, so do we like to have an individual style of fence. The pattern sketched above contains eighteen different styles with gates to match. They not only vary in design but also in cost of material and labor. Send for the pattern and select the fence and gate that the Homeniuk family with your home. Cutting diagrams are given on the pattern for each design with directions for erecting. Ask for pattern 386 and enclose 35c. There are five other projects in the Homestead Improvement Packet which will be mailed for $1.50 additional.

Many steps may be saved if cabinets for things in constant use are near the stove and sink. It is with this in mind that these ten space-savers were planned. They are designed to fit common sizes of pots and pans and the usual seasoning containers. Some are placed on the shelves and others are fitted to cabinet doors. The length measurements are variable to meet special requirements and the shelf racks may be arranged in different ways as needed. They may be made of scraps as pieces are all small; and are put together with brads and glue. The pull-out pan rack in set rolls. The tiered dish rack gives easy access to everything. Pattern 413 is 35c. The Kitchen Handies Packet of six projects to save steps will be mailed for $1.50 additional.

who has read Horatio Alger. They have triumphed under severe adversity. The Homeniuk family is very large, 18 in all, and not well-to-do. Mr. Homeniuk works for the city, and to help with the large family, Mrs. Homeniuk works at a local cafe. They live on the outskirts of Yorkton (close to the golf course) in a very modest home. At times it was quite difficult to provide golf clubs and golf equipment for the boys.

There are a lot of people who take credit for Homeniuk success story. It is in human nature for some people to say, "we put them on their way." Only the Homeniuk know, which people really helped them, but the one who provided the greatest "fatherly" direction for them, gave them jobs, encouraged them at golf, provided them with equipment, is Bill Kerr—the pro at Yorkton's Deer Park. Others have also been quite lavish with balls, equipment and transportation for the boys. Once G. H. Castleford, the member of Parliament for Yorkton, drove the boys to Clear Lake, paid all their expenses, to watch Stan Leonard and Bobby Locke.

At that time young Wilfred didn't think too much of Locke's golf and after the seventh hole went to look for his John Skulak. He had been generous toward the Homeniuk. Last year most Deer Parkers contributed to a kitty to send the boys to Montreal.

The Homeniuk family is a legend around Deer Park. Wilf and Teddy work the course. In the evenings they practice for five hours. Wilfred, who is so diligent at this, finds it no bother to hit 80 balls with each of his 14 clubs. Wilf hates school and has been heard to say, "all I need to know is how to add up my score."

Wilf, Teddy, Rudy and Gestapo (real name is Stapo, but pro Bill Kerr playfully added the GE) play other sports. Murray Larn, strong thinker Wilf is going to be a real prospect for his junior Pats. Last year Ted was at Prince Albert as a juvenile and Lege Franks is going to bring him up to junior ranks next year. Rudolph plays for the provincial champion Yorkton Junior B's. Gestapo is the star at Simpson school and of the Yorkton bantams.

The Homeniuk dogs would be a story in itself. They are educated to hunt golf balls and are devoted to each boy. Flash, now dead, was an intelligent mutt who could find 30 balls a day. Last day, the present dog, is so well trained that he goes into sloughs and ponds for balls with his feet. It is an experience at Deer Park to see how intelligent and devoted to their masters dogs can be, if only they are loved, and these dogs are a joke for their lack of pedigree.

Yorkton is proud of the Homeniuk family. Last year the weekly Yorkton Enterprise carried their every golf movement for two months. Yorkton was recognized as the golf centre of the province only because of the Homeniuk family, aided by other Yorkton provincial golf champs like Vic Pehrenbach and Bill Stolar.

Sammy the seal stuck?

ST. MARY'S, Isles of Scilly, Eng.—Sammy the silly seal may have had a flat tire.

Constable Harold Bunney, the sea-going cowboy who went out to rescue Sammy with a lasso recently, couldn't find him. Bunney, half of the police force of the five inhabited islands in this group off southwestern England, thinks Sammy may have managed to find himself.

"Or he may have bobbed off to another island. We'll be on the lookout and first word we hear we're all set to make another try to rescue him," the constable said. Sammy stuck his head through an airplane tire inner tube and got himself stuck. Everytime he tried to dive for fish he found him self searing back to the surface.

Fishermen saw him sitting forlornly on a rock and an expedition was organized to relieve him of the tire before he starved to death. But his disappearance led to the theory that Sammy had solved his own dilemma—maybe with the help of a sword fish buddy.

"Did you hear about the fire at Sandy's?" said Macpherson, suddenly.

"When?" asked his friend. Macpherson put the bottle down with a sigh of relief.

Sightseeing behind the Iron Curtain a visitor noticed two paintings. He inquired about them, and was told it was a picture of the great Russian inventor, Ivanov.

After he had recovered from this, the visitor asked about the second portrait, which was considerably bigger. "That," he was told, "is a picture of Petrovich, our greatest inventor."

"And what did he invent?" "He invented Ivanov."

"No," was the reply, "are you paralysed?"

Canada again ranked third among world's trading powers in '53

OTTAWA.—Canada again ranked third among the world's trading powers in 1953.

The United States was first, Britain second and Canada third in total trade, the bureau of statistics reported.

Canada has held the third spot all through the post-war years with the exception of 1951 when she was beaten out for the position by France.

In 1953 U.S. imports and exports totalled $27,604,000,000; Britain, $16,880,000,000; Canada, $9,458,000,000; West Germany, $8,160,000,000; France, $7,795,000,000; Belgium and Luxembourg combined, $4,633,000,000.

Last year Canada accounted for 6.3 percent of the trade in the 25-cent world, the bureau estimated.

Chemicals being developed which attack cancers

TORONTO.—Chemical agents which selectively injure cancer cells are being developed, Dr. A. F. McKay of the Defence Research chemical laboratories, Ottawa, said recently. Addressing the 37th annual conference of the Chemical Institute of Canada, Dr. McKay said several derivatives of the components of nucleic acids are expected to be investigated for their selective toxic action against cancerous tissues.

One chemical agent, urethane, has been found to produce effects in leukemia similar to those induced by X-ray therapy.

The most encouraging approach in the search for toxic agents against cancer has been the recent work on purine derivatives, he said.

"One purine derivative has been described by a researcher in the past six months as possibly representing the first step in the attainment of chemi-therapeutic agents for cancer with selective action in man."

Dr. R. B. Rogers of the federal Department of Mines told delegates that metal corrosion, plus money spent on various preventive methods now in use, costs Canada $500,000,000 a year.

"All of the approximately 70 known metals and thousands of alloys will corrode under certain conditions," Dr. Roger said.

One method used at present to prevent electrolytic corrosion was to store equipment in rooms with artificially dried atmospheres.

Many improved protective coatings are being developed in chemical and metallurgical laboratories to treat new corrosive conditions which often appear in industry and in atomic energy development, he said.

Dr. R. C. McLaughlin, professor of chemical engineering at the University of Toronto, said that he and Dr. D. B. Mutton have patented a process which permits color to be "locked in" to rayon, cotton and paper. This did away with conventional dyeing methods.

Ordinary cellulose is difficult to dye because it contains no strongly reactive groups such as those present in wool and silk, he said.

"This new colored material is as stable to wear and tear as the original cellulose material," he said.

Dr. J. T. Donald of Montreal estimated that about 9,000 to 10,000 engineers will be required in Canadian industry by 1975, but at the present rate of graduation only 5,000 will be available by then.

Then engineers elected Adolph Monasch of Montreal as chairman of the institute's board of directors.

OUR COMPLETE SHORT STORY—

A LITTLE BUSINESS

By M. J. COLLINS

UNCLE JOE chuckled, "All right, the caution, Martha, what some people will do with their money." He looked over the top of the newspaper at his wife. "Here's a fellow that left all his money to a dog."

"Not any sillier," Martha retorted, "than you lending a thousand dollars to Sandy Smith. You'll have to whistle for it."

"Oh, I don't know," he answered slowly. "I trust Sandy."

"Humph!" Martha said with disbelief, her knitting needles clicking faster. "What did he want with it?"

"Never asked him," Uncle Joe admitted.

"Well," Martha exclaimed, "Joe Quinn, you take the cake. Of your noodle, if you ask me."

"All right, I made a mistake," Joe threw down his paper. "A man has to believe in his friends or this would be a poor world. I'm tired of sitting around here."

Martha knitted on. Joe was more cantankerous every day, she mused, suddenly the telephone rang. It was Sandy Smith's mother.

"Did you know that my son and my husband bought two hundred acres of land down by the edge of the swamp. Sandy came home from the city today and told me about it."

Martha gaped. "Oh yes, I knew Joe and Sandy had a little business."

"When Joe came back, she was ready for him. 'Look here, what're you and Sandy up to?'"

"So you know, eh? Well, we bought the land with the site of the old fort and the trail that runs down to the creek. Sandy and I are going to fix it up. He found the plans for it and a couple of drawings in an old military diary. You know he has been always digging down there since his kid days. He knows those old Indian villages backward."

"And your thousand dollars? He's put the Indian sign on it."

"Dunno. Might even build a museum and put up a sign on the highway about it and charge people twenty-five cents to go through it. Maybe we'll put up a gas station, too. Sandy thinks we can make the old cannon that was lost somewhere near the creek. He was down to the city buying one of those new detectors they had in the war. He's coming over after it."

supper to show me how it works." Joe grinned. "Guess I'll cost a few pennies before we're through."

Martha glared but morning found her packing a lunch for Joe. Sandy and he were off for a check over their property and get their plans going, he said. They might even hire a couple of men to cut logs.

Aunt Martha racked her brain figuring a way to stop this foolishness. Then she had a brain-wave. The church minister! The very man, Mr. Morrison was the one to get after Joe. On the telephone, he promised to drop by the long trip.

Uncle Joe came home worn out but happy as a lark. "What a day!" he told her. "We tramped all over that ground. Sandy drew a map and we staked out the places to dig. Martha this arch... this arch... something or other that Sandy is studying at college in real stuff."

Aunt Martha was less than impressed. And when the minister arrived next day, she didn't spare her opinion. "What's this?"

Mr. Morrison thoughtfully considered the problem. "I suppose Joe hasn't a great deal to do since he sold his farm to his nephew. If I remember correctly, this old fort is over on the next concession line, down by the swamp. I'll drive down and have a talk with Joe."

"That'll be fine," Aunt Martha beamed. "Bring him back and all'll be happier ready."

Now Joe would have some sense talked into him. She didn't mind him wasting the money. Goodness, they had plenty, and ammunitions besides. But what a silly thing for a man of his age to get set up over. Then she began to think what Mr. Morrison had said. Maybe Joe was having fun. Was she spoiling it?

When Joe and Mr. Morrison arrived home, Aunt Martha had the table almost groaning under the food.

"That seems a wonderful place Joe and Sandy bought," Mr. Morrison told her, when he had a chance. "Joe figures there's about a hundred and fifty thousand feet of good pine that'll bring them five thousand dollars the day they sell it."

"You," Aunt Martha said, turning to Uncle Joe, "never mentioned that to me."

He grinned. "Sandy and me are keeping that in reserve. Maybe our idea won't work out. Mr. Morrison is coming out to help us when he has any spare time."

"There was a glint in his eye as he added, 'We can certainly do with all the help we can get.'"

Aunt Martha knew better when she saw it. "I'll put up a lunch for us all tomorrow and will go along with you. Just to see you're getting your money's worth."

More north Sask. areas named

Two Saskatchewan topographical features have been officially named after a serviceman who gave his life in defence of Canada during World War II and after two prominent citizens and pioneers of the Grenfell district. This was announced by Hon. J. H. Brodeur, Minister of Natural Resources.

Millar Lake in the Pelican Lake area of Northern Saskatchewan honors the memory of Pte. Sgt. George Ronald Millar, RCAF, whose parents, Mr. and Mrs. Thomas G. Millar, are residents of Bethune, Sask. Pte. Sgt. Millar was posthumously awarded the Operational Wings of the RCAF in recognition of gallant service in action against the enemy. He died when his aircraft, damaged in an air raid over St. Nazaire, in 1942, crashed and burned while attempting a landing in England.

Millar Lake is situated nine miles north of Pelican Narrows Settlement and is about 150 miles northeast of Prince Albert.

Loveridge Island is named after Mr. and Mrs. Albert John Loveridge who are now living in Grenfell where they take a keen interest in the progress of the prosperous community. The couple played a most important part in its development. Mr. Loveridge is nearing his 82nd birthday and he has farmed in the Grenfell district for over 70 years.

Loveridge Island is situated in the Nutcracker Lake area, 40 miles northeast of Lac la Ronge.

YOUNG FLOW CHAMP

PORTAGE LA PRAIRIE, Man.—Seven judges debated more than two hours before selecting 14-year-old Gerald Lettice, of High Bluff, as winner of the Manitoba and Western Canada plowing championships. The modest school boy had tough competition from 45 other plowmen.

86-year-old hits Calgary trail on tractor

For a man in his 86th year to start out by tractor on a 1,600 mile trip is no small undertaking, yet that is just what one of Rapid City's best-known pioneers undertook.

Walter Forsyth, seated on his 1946 Massey-Harris tractor, on which he is accustomed to make daily trips to and from his farm in the Little Saskatchewan valley, northeast of Rapid City.

Before a large crowd who had gathered outside the local hotel, he took his leave, with the words of a parting song ringing in his ears and the sound of auto horns proclaiming the beginning of the long trip.

Mr. Forsyth, known as "Watty" throughout western Manitoba, decided to attend the 1954 Calgary exhibition and stampee, July 5 to 10, and to make the round trip by tractor. He left Rapid City intending to travel by easy stages; to reach his destination around July 31. He travels on No. 1 highway. His return trip may be by the States.

He is making arrangements for parking on the Calgary exhibition grounds in real stuff.

He has taken sufficient postcards, addressed to H. G. Westwood, Rapid City, so that he can mail one daily to keep the folks back home posted as to his progress.

Blackshaws built a small two-wheel trailer which Watty will use as bedroom and sitting room. It is 6½ feet, with curved roof sloping from front entrance. It carries a spare tractor battery so that he may have electric light in the trailer.

The Massey-Harris company overhauled and repainted the tractor, also supplied a tractor umbrella. Gray furnished a foam rubber seat.

Harold Westwood and others provided the gas supply for the entire trip. The Reporter printed a number of cards, showing Watty on his tractor, which have been going like hot cakes and providing revenue.

In addition he has a few garments which he intends collecting on his return.

As many readers know, this pioneer, here since 1884, has lost one leg. The other was but in a threatening accident, back in 1903.

If you are travelling, or have friends out west, tell them to be on the lookout for tractor No. 1, 47—this is Watty Forsyth, Rapid City.

Year-round fishing in B.C.

British Columbia's position as a sportsman's paradise has been strengthened by legalizing year-round fishing in mainland lakes.

A provincial game branch ruling now makes it legal for a properly licensed angler to fish any lake on the mainland at any time of the year, provided the lake is not covered with ice.

The liberalization of sport fishing regulations does not include mainland streams, lakes or streams on Vancouver Island.

The action simplifies laws in keeping with similar moves throughout the continent. This does away with some 70 different open dates for individual lakes.

In addition new regulations now make the legal-size limit for trout in 50 fishing waters instead of the province six inches instead of eight.

Fisheries officials believe the reduced size limit will encourage sportsmen to fish lakes and streams where trout are predominantly small. The original eight-inch limit was imposed in the belief that each fish should spawn at least once before being caught. However, officials no longer consider this necessary.

The new regulations affect about 100,000 anglers, one-third of whom are non-residents.

Sask. divided into 49 zones to aid hunters and game officials

REGINA.—In order to aid hunters and game officials alike, Saskatchewan has been geographically divided into 49 zones by the biological division of the game branch, Department of Natural Resources. This was announced by E. L. Paynter, Provincial Game Commissioner.

The primary reason for zoning the province into management zones is to give reference aid in the problems of wildlife management. In this way hunting pressure, habitat development, population estimates, disease outbreaks and other ecological data can more easily be related to specific areas.

Also, the intensity of management practices can be aligned with the intensity of hunting pressure, or any other factor which might be limiting to wildlife populations.

While the number of management zones may appeal to hunters at first sight, it should be remembered that this is a management step which will be to their ultimate advantage. They will also assist in the compilation of bag statistics for areas and the setting of seasons.

Once learned, the new zone system will not be cumbersome because it will not be changed for a number of years to come. In the past there have been new hunting areas with new boundaries, each and every year.

In developing the new plan the game branch has used highways and railway lines extensively as land markers and boundaries of zones. Highways have been used wherever possible for the convenience of hunters who will be able to plot the nearest course to the hunting area designated with the minimum of trouble.

Prior to each season much publicity will be given as to the numbers of the zones which will be opened. For example, antelope hunters might be informed that zone numbers 6 to 13 inclusive and number 29 would be opened for

Vancouver actress big hit on stage, TV, in Britain

LONDON.—Barbara Kelly of Vancouver is a vivacious, green-eyed blonde actress, a mother of three, a devotee of exotic earrings—and a headline habit in London newspapers. A busy figure for several years in the British entertainment world, Miss Kelly earned a fair portion of publicity.

Now, as a regular member of British television's most popular program, the panel game "What's My Line?" she usually rates the front page.

Part of the reason lies in the easy informality of "What's My Line?" which attempts to guess occupations and features a gaffe-constable called Gilbert Harding who ranks as No. 1 British radio and television personality.

But the main reason is Miss Kelly herself, who gets 100 or more letters a week praising her cheerful Canadian disposition—and flair for injecting a human element into proceedings.

Recent sample: When was Mrs. Mary Bulough, 72, was identified speedily as a proof reader, the old lady was disappointed. Her boss had promised her a "pair of earrings larger than Miss Kelly's" if she won.

Miss Kelly whipped off her big chandelier-like danglers and screwed them on Mrs. Bulough's ears. Miss Kelly was on the front page again next morning. The earnings cost her £7 because they were borrowed.

There hadn't been anything like it since Miss Kelly was kissed by a contestant with a hand-bar moustache.

Earnings have become a sort of TV trade mark for the good looking actress-matron, who is in her early 30s.

Sometimes she wears earrings lost for television by jewellers. Sometimes she uses one of her many pairs or borrows from friends. The same principle applies to her TV gash, which based on one evening skirt and a dozen evening tops of her own, supplemented by loans.

Miss Kelly, wife of Vancouver actor Bernard Braden, stepped into "What's My Line?" regularly less than a year ago and was rated TV favorite No. 2 late in 1953 in a newspaper popularity poll.

"I've been lucky this year," she said at the Savoy theatre where she's been playing the lead in the farce, "Angels in Love." Directed by her husband, it was the first stage production for the Bradens who came to Britain in 1949 and have been prospering in radio, stage, television and films.

"Love in Pawn," a film starring the Bradens, is still showing in London. In the works for Miss Kelly is a TV comedy program of her own, still unnamed, but which has "got to be good."

These rodents survive only because they are able to oxidize the dry season they eat. Their bodies thus obtain an amount of water equal to over half the weight of the seeds.

These small creatures nevertheless have to avoid loss of the precious moisture by evaporation from their bodies, so they stay in their burrows during the heat of the day, emerging only in the cool of the night.

Human beings and life in the desert a far more complicated problem. Dr. Edmund Sergent, of Algiers, pointed out that the Sahara is too hot in the summer for white people, and too cold in the winter for the black races.

The nomadic peoples who wander there are unaccustomed to manual labor, and the native negro races who follow a settled life in the desert could only multiply if more water were provided.

A black skin is useful in the desert and other hot regions, according to Dr. J. S. Weiner, of Oxford, because it protects the sweat glands from injury by too much ultra-violet light.

Animals that never drink

Desert-dwelling animals that never drink were described by two American scientists at a gathering at the Royal Institution, London.

The kangaroo rat and the pocket mouse of the Arizona desert go through life without ever swallowing liquid—there is none available.
